POSTAL HISTORY - ALLENDALE, N. J.

The Allendale Post Office was established on November 11, 1869, under Postmaster Smith Roswell and was located at the Erie Railroad Station. At that time the postmaster also served as the railroad ticket agent.

Gross receipts in 1887 were $270.51 compared to $66,267.00 in 1962. As Allendale grew, so did the postal facilities. City delivery service was established March 1, 1954 with 2 city foot routes and 1 mounted route, and in July of 1955 Allendale became a first class post office.

There are presently 15 employee's including 8 city carriers serving approximately 5,000 people. The local post office also serves approximately 100 families residing in the Fardale Section of Mahwah.

Allendale can be proud of its modern post office. These new facilities will play an important part in the future development of our Borough.

Postmaster Charles H. Schubert is very ably assisted by William F. Anderson and the following clerks and carriers.

Warren Scherb	Christian Scherer
Frederick Hasenbalg	Charles Egerton
Joseph Fronzaglia	Frank Neumann
Donald Santore	Robert Straut
Anthony DelColliano	Herbert Yauch
Michael Alsdorf	William Roberts
Roland Steele

The entire staff extends their gratitude and thanks to everyone who made possible the reality of this new and modern postal facility. We will always endeavor, as in the past to render efficient and courteous service to all our patrons.
