In general, only historical narrative sections of the newsletter are included in this index. Allendale Historical Society news items, program information, etc., are not included unless of narrative historical interest. The first 12 years of newsletter publication—from September 1974 to April 1986—are included in this index.

The index is divided into 3 sections: section 1 covers general subjects, section 2 covers names of people, and section 3 lists by title articles which have been published in the newsletter.

The first section, beginning on page 3, covers general topics. An asterisk (*) after a page number in a reference indicates that there is an illustration (photograph, reproduction, drawing, etc.) related to the topic on the page indicated.

It is suggested, when searching for information about a particular subject, that the researcher look under all possible titles, for instance: for Allendale Garden Club, look under "Allendale Garden Club" and "Garden Club." In many instances, but not every instance, there will be cross references.

Houses are grouped together under the heading "houses" and then categorized by subheading according to the name of the owner(s), followed by the location of the house, when known. (For instance: "houses--Fell-Ackerman-Cable, 475 Franklin Turnpike.") In most cases, houses are known by and called by the name or names of the earliest known owners.

The second section, beginning on page 14, covers names of persons. When using this index, it is suggested that all variant spellings be searched. Source materials produce many erratic spellings, so the same person may be listed under more than one variant. Some of these surname variants are cross-referenced, but not all are. It is also wise to look for nicknames; look for married women under both married and maiden name; and look at close approximations (for instance, for names beginning with "Mc" or "Mac," look for the name under both spellings.)

The third section, which lists the articles published by title, begins on page 53.
