The youngsters of Allendale wrapped up Halloween in great style this year by a record attendance at the annual Holiday Observer's party at the school last Saturday night.

Eight hundred forty doughnuts and 26 gallons of cider were consumed by the costumed 300 who descended upon the school auditorium. A parade of the most colorfully dressed showed a variety of characters, from space men to early settlers with a libeal sprinkling of people from the land of make believe. The 25 best, chosen by the judges, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Warriner of Teaneck, were each given a silver dollar.

Four color cartoons were shown on the big screen for the excited youngsters.

The Observers were gratified with the fine reception their party received. For the kids it was the end of a long day of "tricks or treats" which took most youngsters all over town collecting hundreds of treats from housewives.

Another part of the Observer's Halloween activities was the annual window painting which took place the previous weekend. The winners for the gay scenes which decorated downtown store windows were announced as follows:

Allendale's Healthy Government

The most heartening aspect of the Nov. 3 local election was the high percentage of participation in our democratic processess by Allendale's voting public. A high registration had been inherited fom the Presdential election, and according to our own unorficial, and necessarily rough, figures, almost 80 percent of those registered made the trip to the polls.

This is a much better sampling of the public's wishes than could have been hoped for in an offyear election. This fact alone gives strength to the borough government.

Perhaps the most significant fact about the breakdown of the voting on the local scene was the close bunching of all the Borough Council candidates around the mid-way mark. Mr. Van-Houten was elected with a scant but clear majority. Mr. Kort barely nosed out Mr. Dunsby. Even Mr. Cooper trailed only slightly.

The re ord shows that all four were strong candidates with anod following The record also show that there was a good deal of ticket-splitting on Le loca! ballo, and in these facts lies a nice political lesson for Allendale's leaders.

There can be no talk here of "mandates" for any runs way programs It seems evident that the voters were swaved little by emotion and sought of eville facts and moderate, reasonable promises There is no doubt that a thoughtful electorate has voted for good government, above all. They have apparently backed, without sharp division, the things all four candidates stood for: responsible, economical government with sound financial policies: and continued careful zoning and planning for Allendale's growth, with an eye to maintaining the borough's rural atmosphere. In effect they have voted for the men and not the parties. In so doing, they have not settled detailed problems such as the handling of the non-conforming status of certain businesses now in areas zoned as residential or the exact limitations to apply in regulating subdivison lots. But inspection of the voting shows definitely that there can be no political debts to be paid by either of the new councilmen. They are completely free to pursue their jobs, as they must, with the interests of the entire population of Allendale foremost in their minds. It is notable also that with the new division in the council, in which Mayor Tucker holds the tie-breaking vote, Mr. Tucker gains both in power and responsibility. His task, no doubt, now becomes more difficult and his leadership in the public interest even more ncessary.

Public interest in borough affairs is running high. This is a healthy situaton for any covernment. Wth such responsibilities heaped on their shoulders, the Mayor and Council have every right to ask and expect the public to support them wholeheartedly in their sincere efforts to give good government to Allendale.

We wish them Godspeed.
